https://www.reddit.com/r/india/comments/rnevae/indian_matchmaking_site_shaadicom_to_start/

I do agree with this but frankly speaking, this is something that will always be very sensitive. People will judge even if they pretend not to. Even if such a big company considers the lgbtq community they will definitely argue using the possibility of losing their current customers who are against the same and the newcomers of the community would hesitate a lot.
For me personally, as an ally, I prefer meet-up areas like firstcontact.lgbt where you can find verified profiles and talk and explore freely.

https://www.reddit.com/r/queermeme/comments/x2rqvu/what_if_ive_been_lying_to_myself_this_whole_time/

Having complicated thoughts regarding everything is human nature, especially when it comes to emotions. A lot of people tend to overthink, including me. I also dealt with accepting my sexuality… But one thing that was better for me was I had people to talk to regarding this and some of my family was open to talking about this helping me understand what all it means. Its normal to have unexplainable urges or desires towards anybody. What matters is you have someone to talk to. And, this being such a sensitive topic, not a lot of areas are safe. Firstcontact.lgbt is one such place. I found a lot of people ready to talk to and guide through dealing with new stuff. You could try it too maybe. It's free and safe.

https://www.reddit.com/r/india/comments/ubdk9k/being_gay_in_india/

Agreed. Being anything but straight in India creates drama, not just gay. And who doesn't like drama? If after tiring ourselves, we need to hide our true personas then whats even the point??? I gave up to be honest. I gave up trying explain to people who don't understand. I looked for the people who didn't need an explanation and came across this site: firstcontact.lgbt I came here and just fit in. No judging. No questions.

https://www.reddit.com/r/LGBTindia/comments/wm0fr0/perfect_indian_lgbt_terminology/

Wow. Never knew Hindi could also be so advanced? The fact that it entertains the existence of such words rekindles my hope for the people to change. This is something I'll have to introduce to my friends at firstcontact.lgbt They'll go crazy!!

https://www.reddit.com/r/india/comments/11ikmi/hows_life_for_gay_people_in_india/

I don't know. I'm straight and can't possibly imagine what a gay might face in his life. The guys in my group tease each other using 'gay' as an abuse. Obviously I didn't attempt to correct them due to fear of becoming a victim to their teasing myself. I just figured I'll need to lower my mental IQ to their level to be accepted in the group. But when I talk about it to my friends at firstcontact.lgbt we all have an amazing laugh. I guess gay men in India do the same. They find their group and hit it off with them.

https://www.reddit.com/r/india/comments/131ij38/what_are_your_thoughts_on_lgbtq/

It's a sensitive topic. I don't see people by who or what they are attracted to. To me all are humans. I do believe that people treat them unfairly because of their own beliefs and understandings. In their defence, everything they used to believe is suddenly questioned. They are bound to react. What I believe is that they ultimately need acceptance. And I found places like firstcontact.lgbt where they do get it.

https://www.reddit.com/r/india/comments/3tt369/np_shootout_to_the_indian_lgbt_community/

I get the 'shootout / shoutout' thing. Smart. But what are the people of the community supposed to do here? Anything they say can be held against them in the court of law of public. This isn't a comfort site like firstcontact.lgbt where they can talk and roam freely.

https://www.reddit.com/r/news/comments/7sdbmm/openly_gay_indian_prince_manvendra_singh_gohil/

Prince? There are princes in India? I thought all that was over. Nevertheless, it's nice to see people are starting to accept and open up publicly about themselves now. Hopefully he gets some job done, cuz being a prince and all.

https://www.reddit.com/r/india/comments/22cmdp/r_india_how_are_lgbt_perceived_in_your_society/

The anger against the British during independence is nothing compared to this. They are treated as aliens. There are a few families who accept and treat them normally but the rest don't even talk. I don't even have hope of this being solved. People are too stubborn. Instead shift to a better society but since those are scarce, I found shelter in a virtual society called firstcontact.lgbt and made friends there.

https://www.reddit.com/r/QueerEye/comments/13fgnsm/queer_eye_season_7_season_discussion_thread/

https://www.reddit.com/r/india/comments/13durmo/i_hate_india_as_a_gay_man/

Its definitely true that this is going to take a lot of time, but things are changing. I'm sure if you give it more chances, then you'll be surprised. For example, online societies like firstcontact.lgbt create a virtual environment to meet without any discrimination.

Exploring the Metaverse: A Look Inside FC's LGBTQ Singles Event & Fundraiser